Looking back on our Regional Meeting..

Many thanks to our sponsors, exhibitors, speakers, and delegates for making it a success.

The Regional Meeting was an exciting opportunity for the endodontic community to get together at The Belfry Hotel & Resort, Birmingham, for two days of table clinics, lectures, exhibition, and networking – not to mention the Peaky Blinder's themed Congress Dinner!

We very much looking forward to seeing you again at our future events.

The Guide to Traumatic Dental Injuries of Permanent Teeth

The new guide is now available

Past President and BES Dental Trauma Working Group founder and lead, Maria Lessani, discusses the impact of the 'Guide to Traumatic Dental Injuries of Permanent Teeth':

"Dental trauma is at the core of acute dental problems. We know this because, so often, dentists seek advice from endodontists, paediatric dentists, and oral surgeons. At the BES, we identified that we need to collaborate and bring together this information so that it's easily accessible. That was the foundation of the Working Group looking into this. I'm really grateful for the colleagues that came onboard with me the year that I was President of the BES and started to work with me on this.

"What we have found is that people want access to care, so we are creating an interactive map so that people can identify where to go to get some help. Also, the moment a patient is present with a dentist, they want to find out why this has happened and what can be done. In that scenario, it can be quite stressful for everybody in the surgery, so we hope that the website can be a port of call for signposting and to access information quickly. There are proformas that people can download to gather the correct information at that point, but there are also simple guides on splinting, for example, which they probably don't do very often, but need to be able to do very quickly when it's needed.

"We are really proud to be linking the website to Dental Trauma UK, and we hope that the work we've put together to make it simple and accessible for everybody is useful."
